Saiki Drive

Gaze in wonder at the uninterrupted azure vista.

Discover breathtaking sweeping views!

Your mind will switch into vacation mode as you gaze at the horizon in the distance. You will spontaneously take a deep breath as the ever-changing ocean, picturesque fishing ports, and dynamic mountains stir your emotions. With a beautiful sea spreading along the pacific coast and verdant rural landscape inland, you will discover that Saiki is dotted with scenic spots, sparkling with the charms of nature offering many spectacular views. The scenic route with views of Yonouzu and Kamae, also known as Bungo Kuroshio Line, offers the best exhilarating seaside drive. The route's highest point, 250 meters above sea level, offers the view of Bungo Channel below, where the mountains of Shikoku can be seen behind the open sea on a clear day.

Take a moment to enjoy the gentle sound of the waves, the sea breeze caressing your skin, and the sea merging with the sky.

Hatouzu Bathing Beach

The beautiful beach with starkly contrasting white sands and green pine groves is counted as one of Japan's top 100 white sand beaches and green pine groves. Situated at the prefecture's southernmost tip, it is the most popular bathing beach in the summer.

Sora no Koen (Sky Park)  Situated along Bungo Kuroshio Line with the magnificent Pacific Ocean below, the park offers the view of the mountains of Shikoku on a clear day. It is perfect for a family day-out.

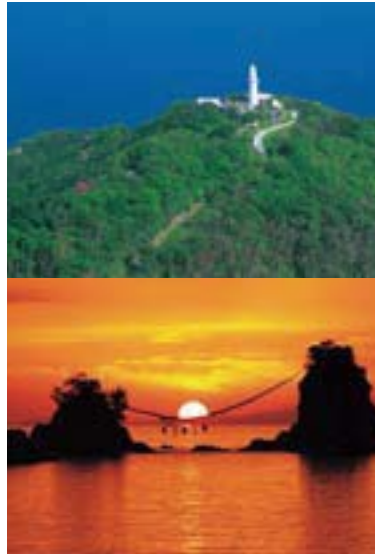

Bells of Happiness

Ring the Bells of Happiness in the four scenic spots Saiki is proud of; Marinopolis Memorial Park, Tsurumisaki Lighthouse, Sky Park, and Takahira Tembo Park, is said to make your dreams come true. Ring the bells with your friends or significant other.

Visit Saiki's seaside Love Roads

There are energy vortexes called Love Roads that attract romance in Saiki's Ura area, known for its saw tooth coastline. About 16 places are dotted around four areas; Kamiura, Tsurumi, Yonouzu, and Kamae, and each one makes a perfect dating spot for lovers. The twin rock bound by a heavy rope at Kamiura district's iconic Bungo Futamigaura is believed to help visitors with family happiness, fulfillment in love, and matchmaking. Your luck is sure to improve if you wish for help in love against the spectacular sea view!

Tsurumisaki Lighthouse at Kyushu's easternmost point is where the sun rises the earliest in Kyushu. Why not ring the Bell of Happiness while enjoying the spectacular vista?

Bungo Futamigaura is a cherished symbol of Kamiura district. The inseparable, tightly bound rope that never falls might impart its powers to strengthen the tie between lovers.

Tanga Hodai Park 浦

A former military fortress is a peace-themed park today. The riptides of Motonoma Strait seen from the plaza are spectacular.

Launch ceremony

Attend an old-fashioned launching ceremony to celebrate the completion of a new ship. Such an occasion has become rare in Japan, but it is a ritual that is essential to the region's shipbuilding industry.

Open air sightseeing cruises offer spectacular views, where visitors can experience the seasonal landscapes all year.

Connecting visitors to Saiki with its nature, food, and culture...

Saiki can boast Kyushu's largest city, with diverse food, history, and nature.

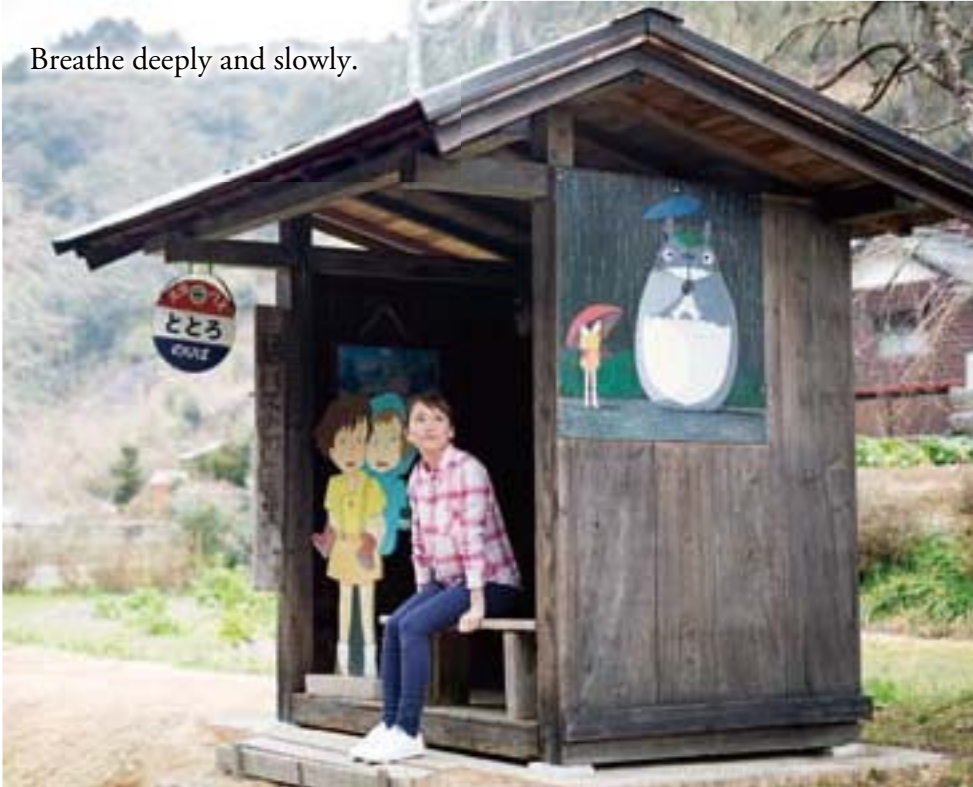

The city considers all its unique elements as tourism resources and provides various experiences to tourists with residents' help. The way a massive ship slowly launches into the sea with a splash at a dynamic launching ceremony is an overwhelming sight! We hope you get to see the grand ceremony for celebrating the completion of a new ship.

Saiki city imparts its many charms to visitors, including cruises for enjoying the sawtooth shaped coastline, fishing experiences with local fishermen, and water sports.

Totoro's bus stop 里

Ume Minami-Tabaru, Saiki.

The quiet satoyama feels like Totoro's village, where numerous Totoro dolls and a cat bus welcome visitors. Totoro is an actual place name in Ume, Saiki, where there used to be a local bus stop. The bus stop sign still stands at the site.

Slow, leisurely and nostalgic. Explore the old-fashioned surroundings.

A satoyama (farming landscape near the hills and mountains) is a beautiful and uniquely Japanese environment where nature is in harmony with the people and the various creatures that it nurtures. Why not visit the gorgeous landscapes where people and nature resonate together, and experience the unspoiled nature and the old way of life? Your heart will feel lighter by just placing yourself in an abundant yet simple environment. Idyllic farmland, mountains in seasonal colors, and natural smiles fill the hamlets of Ume, Naokawa, Yayoi, and Honjo in Saiki. They are reminiscent of the setting of the anime film, "My Neighbor Totoro". Every district offers truly varied features, from a forest that makes you feel as if a real Totoro might appear, to a unique monument that replicates a large watermill used by farmers to generate power in the old days. A journey through a satoyama will give you pleasure and a sense of security that you are surrendering yourself to something greater. The time you spend experiencing the rich landscapes and local stories that you will hear will be deeply engraved in your heart.

Uta Genka Bridge 里

The bridge spans across the Kitagawa Dam lake on the boundary between Oita and Miyazaki prefectures. Its beautiful geometric form makes it an iconic spot. The roadside rest area Michi-no-Eki Ume is nearby.

Firefly trail 里

Visitors can see an astonishing number of fireflies, along Saiki's first-class river Banjo. Honjo's Kabuchi district provides the best view, where many people visit in early June.

Honjo's large watermill 里 Honjo Onagara, Saiki.

The Honjo district, AKA "Daisuisha no Sato" (home of the giant watermill), has a wooden watermill monument. With a diameter of 18.18 meters and 128 blades, it is one of Japan's largest wooden watermills. Visitors can try their hands at making soba noodles at Suishajaya Nanohana.

We want to protect our precious treasures. Sobo, Katamuki and Okue Area Registered as a UNESCO Geopark

A UNESCO Geopark is a concept for developing economically and socially sustainable ecosystems and biodiversity through conservation. An area centered on the mountains of Sobo, Katamuki, and Okue on the boundary of Oita (Saiki, Taketa, Bungo-Ohno) and Miyazaki (Nobeoka, Takachiho, and Hinokage) prefectures was registered as a UNESCO Geopark in June 2017.

The park contains mountainous areas with Kyushu's highest peaks, beautiful valleys, and virgin forests. The forests contain a wide variety of plants, including broad-leaf trees such as the red-bark oak and summer greens, which produce delightful crimson foliage. It is also an important area inhabited by indigenous species on the brink of extinction, including the Japanese serow and certain Asian salamanders. Folk entertainment, such as festivals and kagura (sacred music and dance), has been passed down through generations, and reverence for nature is rooted in the region's culture. Various activities, including bioassessment, nature camps, trekking, and outdoor events are offered to help protect the region's abundant nature and pass it on to the next generation.

Local rice bowl dishes topped with foods from the sea and the mountains

Saiki Bowl Saiki don

Saiki that boasts the most extensive acreage in Kyushu, offers a wide selection of unique rice bowl dishes for you to savor the foods of the sea and the mountains with gusto, thanks to the region's bountiful nature. Find your favorite from Atsumeshi for enjoying marinated sashimi with piping hot rice to seafood bowl and wild game bowl.

Shirasu (Whitebait) Bowl Shirasu don

Scarce, fresh whitebait caught in the morning, and fluffy boiled whitebait: Both make perfect toppings for a bowl of rice, and if you come across them, you must try them before going home! Go on, take a big bite. They also come in mini bowls.

Venison Poêlé Bowl

Shika poeler don

The dish made with local venison thighs involves pan-frying the meat slowly in butter, leaving the inside tender and moist. The light-tasting dish has a gentle, gamey flavor.

Atsumeshi Atsumeshi

The rice bowl dish consists of sashimi such as yellowtail, horse mackerel, and mackerel marinated in a soy-based sauce, arranged over piping-hot rice, topped with condiments, and steeped in tea or dashi.

Column

We also recommend Saiki's bar foods with a twist

Umaimon (tasty food) Street

As the sun goes down, the red lanterns begin to light up in the street lined with izakayas (taverns) in Saiki. The so-called Umaimon Street bustles with people seeking Saiki's tasty fare. Besides eateries serving fresh seafood, those specializing in chicken dishes are also popular. Make sure you try the profoundly deep Saiki's culinary world.

A traditional and versatile seasoning of a fishing town

Saiki Sesame Dashi

Gomadashi (sesame dashi) is a soul food made with love by older women in fishing villages. It is made by grilling and flaking locally-caught horse mackerel and lizardfish and making a paste out of mirin, soy sauce, and lashings of sesame seeds. It makes a dish come to life and is used in a variety of dishes.

Seafood Bowl

Kaisen don

You must not miss trying a seafood bowl if you want to get your fill of the fruits of the sea nurtured by one of Japan's top fishing grounds, the Bungo Channel. Many kinds of seafood are caught throughout the year, and the numerous seasonal fish gracing the bowl speaks of the sea's abundance.

Enjoy many delicious morsels

Country feasts utilizing the region's climate await you in Saiki, where the environment is blessed with the sea, mountains, and rivers. Saiki's favorable environment created the phrase "Saiki's lord is alive thanks to the sea" in the Edo period. These days, people say, "the woodlands nurture the sea's bounty." The culinary offerings utilizing nature's bounty from the sea to the mountains are richly varied, from seafood bowls topped with a luxurious range of seafood to game and traditional home cooking. The abundance and freshness of countless food ingredients are thanks to the region's excellent environment blessed with the sea and mountains' bounty. To this day, the locals' creative ideas are giving birth to new local specialties. What will you try first in the town of gastronomy where you will find delicious things all year?

Saiki Sesame Dashi Udon

Saiki gomadashiudon

The regional dish consists of boiled udon topped with traditional sesame dashi, steeped in hot water. The white fish and aromatic sesame seasoning act as dashi when mixed well, creating a mild-flavored soup.

Saiki Sushi

Saiki Sushi

Fish swimming in the Bungo Channel's rough waves have firm flesh and just the right amount of fat. When a skilled chef works his magic on such excellent fresh fish, it instantly turns into Saiki sushi. Saiki's sea yields one of the highest volumes and varieties of seafood. The range of sushi ingredients alone is said to exceed 50. Please enjoy seafood when it is in-season as it tastes the best and provides the highest nutritional value.

Bungo Channel's seasonal catches and masterful skills create Saiki's gastronomic fare.
